THE LVH LUXURY SURF BROCHURE

LVH invites you to indulge in yet another exhilarating experience:
THE MAJESTIC ART OF SURFING!

Surfing is not merely a sport — it is an expression of freedom, adventure, and finesse that has captivated the hearts of those who dare to try it. It beckons you to feel the essence of nature's grandeur, offering an opportunity to reconnect with your inner spirit and elate your senses.

Our bespoke luxury experience brochure has been carefully crafted to cater to your refined tastes by matching some of the world's most acclaimed surf spots and breaks with our vast pool of exceptional vacation homes. Therefore, each location not only offers the most exhilarating experience with sounds of soothing waves and breathtaking vistas, but also the most luxurious accommodations with indulgent amenities.

On this thrilling journey, skillful instructors will guide you, while our wellness experts are there to ensure the ultimate holistic experience that combines mindfulness and indulgent spa treatments.

Allow yourself be mesmerized as you carve a path across the gleaming crests of the ocean, leaving an indelible mark of elegance and poise in your wake. So, line up in your take off zone and harness the swells with LVH. Find spectacular surf destinations curated by LVH on the following pages.

SURF BREAKS & LVH

LVH

You can choose to indulge in the sun-kissed shores of Malibu, California, master the hypnotic waves of Trestles or “The Wedge” in Orange County; or embrace Pura Vida while in Santa Teresa and Nosara of Costa Rica. You might want to unravel the enigmatic Azuero Peninsula and the hidden treasure of Pedasi in Panama. Should you decide to ride the legendary swells and point breaks of the Atlantic and conquer the king of them all at Portugal’s Nazare, LVH has you covered.

It may be that you’d rather be enchanted by the exotic charms of Uluwatu and Canggu in Bali or surrender to the beguiling beauty of Cape Town? On that note, the land down under, with its natural idiosyncrasies, might sound more appealing to your senses.

Perhaps, if you wish, unleash your daring side in places brimming with luxury like Punta Mita in Mexico, Anantara in the Maldives or feel the prestige of Sardinia – the choice is yours.

A surfing paradise, Kauai is a place where the waves never stop. With its consistent offshore winds and epic ground swells, this island promises a thrilling surf experience all year round. Whether you're a seasoned pro or a beginner looking to conquer your first wave, Kauai is the ultimate surfing destination. For big waves, head to Kauai's north shores during winter and spring, where the surf breaks are massive and adrenaline-pumping. In November and December, the average swell height reaches eight feet, making for some heart-stopping moments. During the summer months, waves are more manageable, with the southern parts of the island offering the best spots for surfing. From May to June, the average waves reach up to seven feet tall, while from July to October, they are more modest at five feet, but with a swell consistency of around 90 percent.

In 1907, the famed American novelist-journalist Jack London and his wife Charmian stumbled upon a curious pastime while exploring the enchanting Pacific archipelago – surfing. Little did they know that their discovery would be the catalyst for a tourism boom that would transform Hawaii forever. With endless turquoise-blue waters and waves that seem to go on forever, Hawaii is every surfer's dream destination. But surfing in Hawaii isn't just reserved for the experts. With waves to suit every level of experience, from beginner to pro, there's something for everyone. And with the consistent, stable temperatures of the island's two seasons, summer ("kau") from May to October, and winter ("ho'oilō") from November to April – you can hit the waves any time of year.

While North Shore of O'ahu may have established itself as surf meccas, Maui is no slouch when it comes to offering famous beaches for experiencing the "sport of kings." If you are a thrill-seeker ready to ride the waves, East of Ho'okipa, you'll find Maui's crown jewel of big wave surfing: Pe'ahi, better known as "Jaws." Here, surfers are towed into monstrous waves by jet-skis, an innovative method that birthed a new sport – "tow-in surfing." For those who are new to surfing, Maui offers plenty of less intimidating spots to take lessons in at West Maui and South Maui, including beaches in Kā'anapali, Lāhainā and Kihei. Whether you're a seasoned pro or a beginner, Maui has something to offer all surf enthusiasts.

Miami may have a few hidden surfing gems tucked away along its numbered streets; however, South Beach steals the spotlight. Situated within Penrod Park, this spot is the ultimate playground for thrill-seekers expecting an adrenaline rush from riding the peaky waves. As the tides roll in during north/northeast swells, the A-frames become the pinnacle of perfection. Also, if you're feeling daring and adventurous, take a journey to the southernmost tip of South Beach, across from South Pointe Park. Beyond the pier lies a haven for keen anglers, boasting the heaviest, most challenging waves around – a true test of your surfing skills. Beware, though, this is where the crowds flock, especially when the waves are “on fire.” And although Florida may not be the first place that springs to mind when it comes to surfing, let's not forget that it's the birthplace of the greatest surfer of all time, Kelly Slater.

The town blossomed into a vibrant surf community, with locals embracing the Pura Vida lifestyle and expat chefs conjuring up succulent delicacies in kitchens far removed from the high-pressure bustle of big cities. Despite its rapid rise to fame, Santa Teresa has managed to retain its laid-back aura, with unpaved roads lending the town a rustic, sandy beach atmosphere that transports you to a bygone era. Surfers of all levels flock to Santa Teresa, eager to test their skills on some of the best waves Costa Rica has to offer.

In the sultry southeast of Brazil lies the stunning city of Rio de Janeiro, renowned as one of the country's top surfing destinations. Rio has played host to the world surfing league for years, with competitions held at the many magnificent surf breaks that dot the state's coastline. With its endless stretches of sandy beaches and diverse surf spots, Rio offers everything from rip-roaring shore breaks to gentle, crumbly waves that are perfect for beginners. The best time to surf in Rio is during the winter, from April to October when a steady stream of swells from the southwest and southeast provides excellent conditions with minimal winds. And while there may be plenty of fellow surfers, the vast expanse of Rio's beaches means there's always a secluded spot to catch a wave. The point breaks at the beach corners are where the action is, so brace yourself for a bit of a crowd.

Although Durban and Jeffrey's Bay offer great surf, Cape Town is the reigning champion for a developed surf scene. This exceptional surf destination boasts everything from gentle beach breaks for beginners to robust reefs and point breaks for the pros. The coastline is diverse and swells hit each beach at different angles, ensuring there are always waves to ride. During the winter months from April to September, the south swell produces the most consistent waves, with June to August being the prime time for the pros to show off their skills. As the temperature heats up during the summer months from October to March, the waves may be smaller and less consistent, but some beaches still perform exceptionally well during this time. The water temperature, however, remains chilly, ranging from 55°F (13°C) to 63°F (17°C). A wetsuit, preferably a 3/4, is a must-have when surfing in Cape Town.

The Sunshine Coast is Australia's final farewell to the sport of surfing, beckoning all wave riders to indulge in its endless stretches of pristine beachfront. It's the ultimate northern destination on the east coast, before the Great Barrier Reef's coral banks cast a lingering swell shadow. With a subtropical vibe and stunning teal waters, it's a feast for the senses. It's hard to resist the Sunshine Coast's 50-mile stretch of white surf beaches. It's an unspoiled and secluded alternative to the bustling Gold Coast, with awe-inspiring breaks waiting to be surfed. While the Gold Coast's Snapper Rocks might experience giant swells, the Sunshine Coast boasts a plethora of point and beach breaks that offer well-shaped waves. The beauty of these breaks is that they're more relaxed than those further south. You can find clean waves around the Noosa National Park, and Alexandra Headlands.

Astonishingly, the phenomenal surfing conditions that draw international thrill-seekers to the Gold Coast are not merely a fortuitous occurrence. Rather, they are the result of a breathtaking confluence of ancient volcanic activity and man-made efforts. And to top it off, prevailing south-west winds craft the swells into breathtaking, perfectly-peeling waves. This remarkable, crescent-shaped coastline houses a playground for surfing enthusiasts, with Snapper Rocks and South Stradbroke Island marking the beginning and end of a thrilling journey, replete with legendary point breaks. It is no surprise that the Gold Coast has become a breeding ground for surfing champions, from the daring Phyllis O'Donnell, and Rabbit Bartholomew of the 60s and 70s, to modern-day legends such as Mick Fanning, Joel Parkinson, and Stephanie Gilmore.

USEFUL ADVICE

Before you set off on your surfing expedition, there are a few key things you need to know. Here are some valuable tips to ensure a smooth and safe journey:

ALWAYS WEAR A LEASH – losing your board could lead to an exhausting swim.

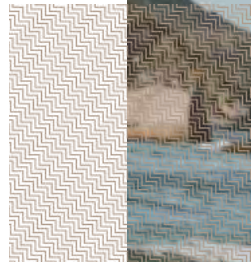

STAY ALERT TO YOUR SURROUNDINGS – surfing is unpredictable, so keep your eyes peeled for any sudden changes.

NEVER SURF ALONE – bring along a buddy for safety.

UNDERSTAND YOUR LIMITATIONS – while surfing is thrilling, it can also be hazardous. Make sure you're aware of your limits and stay within them.

RESPECT THE LOCALS – when surfing in a new area, give respect to the local surfers and their turf. Don't hog all the waves and be considerate of those who have been surfing there for a while.

DETERMINE YOUR SURFING STYLE – are you a longboarder or a shortboarder? Which style fits you best? What kind of waves do you prefer? Knowing this will help you enjoy the experience even more!
