The appellation covers the region from the west of Marseilles to St Raphael in the east, through the area known as the Var. Whilst Cotes de Provence wines are mostly famous for their rose wines, rich, full-bodied reds are also produced, along with light and fresh white wines. Most vineyards are open for sales. The vineyard at Domaine de La Croix is the largest of the Cotes de Provence Cru Classes, spread across 108 hectares of land bearing the Cotes de Provence appellation and divided into three very distinct terroirs that make up the wealth of the estate: Tabarin, Saunier and an exceptional site named Bastide Blanche. Its unique location on the Saint-Tropez Peninsula has given Domaine de La Croix one of its key assets: its microclimate. The grapes receive just the right amount of sunlight and sea air to thrive, producing exceptional wines. With bold architecture and state-of-the-art technology designed by Saint-Tropez-based architect Francois Vieillecroze, the cellar at Domaine de La Croix is astonishingly big — 3,500 m² — and yet, invisible! Buried eight meters below ground to comply with the standards required due to its location on a listed site, it integrates perfectly with its setting of vines and pine forests. Within this monumental structure, the facilities are resolutely modern and await your arrival.
